

The Day the Docs Walked (almost)

They had reached the end of their surgical tubing . . .

Had there been too much teasing? Aviators were caught off guard. Realizing the need for aerospace medicine, they quickly developed a new streamlined annual flight physical.

Fortunately, the potentially disastrous situation was remedied when skeds writers throughout the fleet put their flight surgeons on the schedule the following day . . .

